

ABSTRACT

A method and system for providing communication between a vendor and a client includes a large screen display connected into a network that enables client/vendor communication. Through the network, the vendor's server provides the 5 desired content to the display. For a network of displays, the content may be the same on all displays or unique to each display. The display includes a transmitter and a receiver. Clients interact with the display using a wireless communications or computing device.